CONCEALED WEAPONS .- The execution of a law and not the law itself is a terror to evil-doers. The weakness of most free governments lies in the laxness with which penalties are enforced. There is a prohibition against carrying concealed weapons. There is no ambiguity in the names of the particular weapons forbidden. Yet there are thousands of men traveling up and down the country with murder in their pockets if not in their hearts. With few exceptions they are parties to quarrels they helped to ly. make; men who frequent places of idleness and intemperance until tiful. they become incapable of exercising cool judgment in an exciting mo- ning. ment. The danger we are in from this self-constituted lawless army is an unnecessary danger, and vet it is a real one. Not a week passes that some one is not hurried out of this thing. these men. It would be a hardship paper. to none to disarm them all, and it is the duty of every lover of good order | wharf. to aid in the disarming. Almost every community in this land has gath- pretty. ered bloody fruit from the culpable neglect of this duty .- Ex.

NARROW ESCAPE, Our young friend, D. W. Brown, who resides a few miles from town, came very near losing his life on Monday of last week. He was engaged in sawing timber on his farm. In attempting to turn a log, about 21 feet in diame ter and 24 feet long, it started to roll. and before he could get out of the way it rolled on to him and stopped, crushing and bruising him badly .-The log remained upon him for about thirty minutes before assistance could reach him. Being so close to the log at the time it started opponents. it did not have speed enough to pass over him, and thus his life was saved. Charleston. He will soon recover from his injuries, we are told.

Poison.-If a person swallows any poison whatever, or has fallen into convulsions from having overheated the stomach, an instantaneous remedy, most efficient and applicable in a large number of cases, is a heaping teaspoonful of common salt, and as much ground mustard stirred rapidly in a teacupful of water, warm or cold, and swallowed instantly. It is scarcely down before it begins to come up, bringing with it the remaining contents of the stomach, and lest there be any remnant of the poison, however small, let the white of an egg or a teaspoonful of strong coffee be swallowed as soon as the stomach is quiet, because these very common articles nullify a large number of virulent poisons.

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT .- When the summer of youth is slowly wasting away on the nightfall of age, and the shadow of the path becomes deeper, and life wears to a close, it is pleasant to look through the vista of down the river on this rise. time upon the sorrows and felicities of our early years. Obituary.

Edna Hibbard Guthrie is dead! She was buried on Thursday, September 30th, in the old church-yard at Belpre. Many were there to manifest their love and respect for the departed. When the writer turned The official vote for President will to leave the open grave—to hurry away from the falling clods—his attention was arrested by the approach of more than thirty young people bearing garlands and nicely arrangof more than thirty young people bearing garlands and nicely arranged bunches of beautiful flowers and evergreens. These were her scholars, who, in other years, had from her learned the lessons of knowledge. This lovely tribute of affection, so noiselessty, although with trembling hands, placed in the grave, was the last sad burial act of those who grieved for the departed. The sorrowing multitude turned away, leaven is and of record in the Clerk's office of the County Court of said county, in deed the county, in dee rowing multitude turned away, leaving with the prayer that Guardian Angles might watch over her sleeping dust. Father, mother, sister, husband and children-all brokenhearted because she was not.

Who was she thus mourned?

Edna, the daughter of Mr. T. B. Hibbard, one of Belpre's old citizens. She was born in 1851, and lived at her home till 13 years of age. A that age, evincing great fondness for books and study, she was sent to Ma-rietta, and after a course of four year's study was employed by the Board of Education to teach one of the City Schools. She afterwards taught sev and subsequently married her now bereaved husband, Prof. D. P. Guthrie, who returned to his educational work in West Virginia with an aching heart. She died at her old home, surrounded by those she dearly loved. The burial services were conducted by Rev. John Bartlett, who in a most interesting manner addressed the assemblage of relatives and friends, speaking in brief of the life, sickness and conversations of the deceased—of her sweet-resignation, and hope of Eternal Life. The writer also spoke speaking in brief of the life, sickness and conversations of the deceased-of her sweet resignation, and hope of Eternal Life. The writer also spoke a few words, referring to her stay in Marietta, her superior scholarship, having graduated with the first honors of her class, enjoying the affection and admiration of all who associated the eminent satisfaction given by her to the Board of Education, of
